VITAMIN C: Essential for all health and fertility. A powerful anti-oxidant to fight the formation of free radicals which cause premature aging. Support all adrenal and iron insufficiencies particularly when the body is under stress. Needed for formation of new collagen.

NIACIN: Also known as Vitamin B3. This is a blockbuster vitamin with a broad spectrum of functions including energy production and cholesterol control. It is also vital to sex hormone synthesis and helps build new myelin sheath protection of nerves while stimulating circulation to the central nervous system, the heart, brain and sex organs.

SOD (superoxide dismutase) is a Copper-containing enzyme that protects against free radical damage and boosts fertility.

ZINC: Over one hundred years ago, researchers acknowledged that Zinc was vital to optimal health. In the 1960s it was added to RDA listings because of its necessity for overall health. People with compromised immune systems have one thing in common—low Zinc levels. Zinc is the "orchestrator" of the body's thymus gland, which uses the Zinc to produce vital T-cells, the "foot soldiers of battle" that fight disease that invade the body. Zinc is also needed to keep skin and hair health. Bones need Zinc in order to be strong and its also helps red blood cells transport carbon dioxide to keep oxygen/carbon dioxide levels balanced. Zinc is also the vital mineral of all sperm production through the prostate gland.

BORON: The "fertility" mineral. Ask any farmer of the value of Boron in the soil. Without Boron no plant can flower or produce fruit. Same too of us humans. Boron enhances the use of Calcium, Magnesium, Phosphorus and Vitamin D for bone formation. It also stimulates sex hormone production to protect against fertility-debt.

EPIEDIUM (HORNY GOAT WEED): Found in Southern China, legend has it that mountain goats were observed having far more "kids" or baby goats after nibbling from a certain patch of weeds, which naturally led to deeper study. Researchers at the Chengdu College of Traditional Chinese Medicine in China found that the herb tones the kidney and strengths "yang" the male life force-energy and source of all sexual drive. This herb has been the main part of an ancient formula reportedly used by Chinese emperors for 1,800 years to enhance vitality. Recently, Chinese researchers used the formula on 45 male patients and found 87% improvement in sexual function by reportedly revitalizing the whole male sex organ system which then resulted in dramatic sexual flowering.

TRIBULUS TERESTRIS: Charaka, the Hippocrates of Ayurvedic medicine from India, described Tribulus as being "the greatest of all aphrodisiac and sexual tonic herbs with the abilities to build wonderful stamina for all life". The fruit and root of the Tribulus tree contain pharmacologically important things called "metabolites" which are energy compounds revered for having a stipulatory effect on the immune, sexual and reproductive systems. In 1847, a scientist named "Fritzsche" isolated a chemical from the plant called "Peganum Harmala" that he called "Harmine". This was used in Arabic medicine as a stimulant and aphrodisiac and this compound, "Harmine" is the main active component of Tribulus. The people of Bulgaria have used Tribulus for hundreds of years to treat infertility and as a sexual enhancer. It has also been shown to reduce high blood pressure as well as sodium and fluid retention.

SIBERIAN GINSENG: Possibly the most famous of all the natural-aphrodisiac herbs and used in Traditional Chinese Medicine for over 3000 years. It contains a mixture of compounds, one group called "eleutheroides" has been shown to be primary responsible for its supreme adaptogenic qualities. For centuries, the Chinese have prized Siberian Ginseng to prolong life, enhance health and stimulate both a healthy appetite for food and sexual activity.

But mostly, it's known as a potent aphrodisiac, increasing testosterone levels and sperm counts. A native plant of tropical rainforests in Malaysia, Borneo and Sumatra, the root is now being processed into an additive for natural sexual enhancement here in the West. Laboratory tests conducted at universities in the Far East and Singapore on castrated rats, showed extraordinary results.

FO-TI: The famous "longevity herb" of Chinese Traditional Medicine. Said to help return an aging person to youthful activity once again. A major blood tonic, it is said to increase energy and to cleanse the blood while increasing sperm production in men and increasing fertility in women.

MUIRA PUAMA BARK: Known in South American Folk Medicine as the "Potency Wood Tree", this extraordinary compound is now just being discovered in the West for its vibrant sex-enhancing/aphrodisiac qualities and libido strengthening abilities. A clinical study of 262 patients complaining of lack of sexual desire and inability to attain or maintain erection that was conducted at the famous Institute of Sexology in Paris, France by leading sexual researcher Dr Jacques Wayneberg, found that in just 2 weeks, 62% of patients who had complained of loss of libido claimed "dynamic effects" with 51% of patients with prior erection failure felt "dramatic improvement". This powerful aphrodisiacal and nerve stimulation herbal medicine has been used in South American Folk Medicine for centuries and delivers its transformative powers with no known side-effects such as with Viagra.
